

The Godmother

Tough luck!

-- as Godmother

"The Godmother" is one of the many forms taken by a mischievous deity of questionable origins. She claims to be "the patron deity of stories (and sometimes fortune)" to many, but it's debatable.

Relationship with Bes

Being the one to gift Bes Bandagehead with his current "soul", she views herself as some sort of mother towards him (much to his dismay). It seems that she cannot really grasp how horrible does it feel for a machine to have the consciousness of a human, as she always wonder why Bes dislikes her (just kidding, she knows really).

While she is genuinely fond of him, she also always denies his wish to also make his sister living, stating that "she is worse than a corpse" and that she is limited in her abilities (even though she can if she wants to). It could be said that she wants to see Bes try and "put on a show" first in his try to make his sister alive before actually granting his wish. As his "Godmother", she has the habit of telling Bes stories and knowledge of other worlds that he should have not known, before blocking them off whenever she leaves him alone again. This cause him to have a lot of "on the tip of the tongue" moments when trying to remember something. She also like to gift him stuffs that are useful yet of dubious origins in his birthdays (she proclaims the date of his "first gift" as his birthday, rather than the date of when he was first created).

She always appear to be cheerful and full of herself. almost

Abilities

Dimensional Jumping

Being some sort of deity, she can jump through space and time however she likes. She can be blocked out from entering specific domains by stronger beings though, like for example in this story, The God Eater.

Self-branching

She can "branch" her own self into lower beings in order to take a peek into their life and even take control of their choices and actions from time to time. Usually, no one would realize this at all as she tend to be discreet about it. Bes' "soul" is an example of a less discreet form of this ability.

Though can't be fully nullified or eradicated through usual means, some aspects (such as the "control" aspect) of it can be deactivated when clashed with another being or domain that holds more power than her. However, even when her controlling abilities are cut off, she is still be able to watch through the "branch" she already had. There is not really many ways to get rid of her "branches" because most of them time, it is not something that can be detected through usual means. Even when detected, not much being have the ability to get rid of it.

Armor of Love

Related to her ability to "branch" into lower beings, she has the habit to put on a special protection towards those she is fond of or find interesting. In a way, the "Armor of Love" is an assurance of life that promises those protected by it that they will never die until she gets disinterested in them. Note that it does not say anything about being harmed.

She plays around as a cleaning service from time to time.

Author's Notes

You can draw her however you want as long as you still follow the basic design, since she is liquid in form. No need to worry about getting her design off since she never have a definite shape anyways.
