

Boris Morozov

I'm not evil you simple minded fool!
I am simply cold, and cold is precisely what is needed for great scientific discoveries

-- Boris Morozov

Boris Morozov is one of the chief military scientists of the Russian government. Specifically, he designed and engineered the most powerful human super-soldier developed in his world, "Yuri Sokoloff"

Most of Boris' experiments revolve around human augmentation and developing the human body. He has absolutely no remorse to the people who suffer under his experiments and even shows pride of the results

Backstory

Boris led a fairly normal life, he was born in a good family, his father was a doctor which certainly inspired him to seek a similar career.

When he was young he marveled at the athletic capacity of Olympic athletes and decided he wanted to study something related to that. At 14 he stole a number of drugs from his father and tried injecting/feeding them to his dog to record differences in athletic ability before and after the "treatment". The dog died but it did a little better in his tests (which were hardly professional).

He became an acclaimed student of the faculty of biomedicine, he also studied many different fields of biology and medicine, even engineering. By the end of his studies he was well versed in both mechanics and the human body, which he tried to combine in his experiments to develop the human body. He never experimented on himself, he stated he was "not stupid enough" since that field of science was far too uncertain.

Abilities

Biomedicine and engineering knowledge

Boris spent years studying many fields of medicine, biology and engineering, he graduated early with honors and was recognized as a prodigy. He used that knowledge to create the greatest super-soldier known in his world.

Complete and absolute lack of empathy

Some would argue it isn't a skill, but actually a flaw. However, when it comes to the field Boris works in, in which even a small unnoticed mistake will ruin a human's life irreparably, it is somewhat useful.

Alcohol tolerance

He can drink up to 5 shots of vodka before getting drunk.

Prodigial

Boris is very intelligent and has an easy time learning and understanding foreign topics and sciences. He believes magic to be simply a science he does not yet understand, and often makes deductions and correctly guesses how certain magic systems work even though he's never seen them before.

If he gets his hands on a book regarding a scientific/magical topic, he can absorb it in one quick reading and hastily put its teachings into practice (as long as it doesn't involve altering or using his body).

Small handgun

Boris has a small handgun in his right inner breast pocket, it's loaded but he doesn't have more bullets to reload. He would only use this if Yuri is not around, since he believes Yuri can protect him from anything

Relationship with Yuri

Boris regards Yuri to be his masterpiece, almost as a son (he has no idea how normal people treat their children). Boris boasts and has absolute confidence in Yuri's physical abilities, sometimes blowing things out of proportion, but he doesn't think of Yuri as a living being, and anytime Yuri acts independently or disobeys in the slightest Boris gets annoyed.

Strengths

His brain is his greatest strength, though he isn't exactly a strategist. He has deep knowledge of the human body, as well as how to ruin it or make it fail, it will rarely ever come into use in a combat situation (for which he is not suited).

He has great mental fortitude, and it's hard to convince him he is wrong (almost like talking to a wall). There's a chance that'd make him somewhat resistant to hypnosis but it depends on the potency

Weaknesses

He is incredibly proud and has a short fuse, it's easy to make him angry if you question his intelligence or height of his achievements (especially if you play dumb since he hates idiots)

His body is generally pretty weak, despite all his research into how to develop and improve the human body he never took care of his. He is a little below a regular human when it comes to physical ability. Boris also has weak knees, so he can't run for long

After round 1 he is missing two fingers from his left hand

Author's Notes

Despite playing the role of the supporting character, Boris is closer to being Yuri's real antagonist, as he actively wants to stop Yuri from recovering his memory.

He doesn't really mean to obey his superior's orders, if he wins he will wish for something like "Give me the power of a god" or "I want my brain to be the greatest in the universe"

Feel free to make him as awful as you want. That being sexist, racist, or whatever you feel like, it's kind of the point for him to be an awful person so no need to pull back.
