Nerassa Sweptsnow

Nerassa swore that she would ruin the lives of those who wronged her. No matter the cost.

A dark furred tailless Catwoman, with a gold highlight on her forehead and each cheek and gold colored eyes. She's around 5' 6" and often wears long coats and gloves to hide her lack of tail and her need for her prosthetic arms, having lost both of them long ago. She has messy gray hair she keeps in a ponytail that goes to shoulder length, and she often wears clothes with no patterns just simple gray's, blacks, and dark blues.

Backstory

The city of Visalia is a cyberpunk dystopia, ruled by the megacorporation lifetech. The city was embroiled in a war with a sentient race of robots known as the iron hands. With victory only being achieved through the use of a magic super weapon created by the capture and harvest of Naga, innately magical beings. This large use of magic brought something new. The eidolons, magical beings that caused chaos and destruction all while being undetectable without magic. However there was hope in this new battle, a scientist named Godfrey who worked for Life tech had made a discovery with four teenage girls who had inherited magic potential due to fall out from one of the magic super weapons. Hiding their existence from Life tech godfrey trained them, and help them find ways to transform into more powerful beings to fight the eidolons. They were a team of Magical girls. Nerassa was the medic of the team. With powerful healing magic and incredible speed she danced to and fro on the battlefield making sure her teammates were all right. The magical girls beat back the eidolons, but in the final battle to seal them away tragedy struck. Alice, the leader of the team was killed. This meant that when the time to perform a magic ritual to seal the eidolons away began, they didn't have enough magic to complete it. Always one to give for her friends neurosa gave all of her magic losing her ability to transform. But thankfully providing enough, sealing the eidolons away.

However she soon learned that this cost was more than

Abilities

Nerassa's abilities are mainly related to her mental faculties and ability to act in what way seems necessary to get what she wants. For example she can plan out a way to frame someone for murder, strategically plan a large scale battle, or know just what buttons to push to drive someone over the edge.

She also has the ability to transform into a much more powerful magical form. In this form she becomes much faster, much hardier and can heal serious injuries. She also grows two swords from stumps where her arms were that she can use to fight, having previously been trained in fighting with dual swords.

Strengths

Determined, cunning, emotionally intelligent and able to come up with plans. A wide array of tools and knowledge of how to best use them to exploit enemy weaknesses.

Weaknesses

Single-minded, Petty, can get focused on the details and miss the big picture, incredibly fragile with low stamina from smokers lungs, while she's a planner who's able to create several backup plans, when forced to improvise; she often makes rash decisions that come back to bite her. Often can fail to keep calm under pressure. Because of her setting, guns are a prohibited item so she has not had the time to train with the one she wields. She'd be slow to reload, not have much ammo, and poor aim outside of close range

When transformed

Despite having access to her magic she's unable to properly use any of her old magical abilities, she enters a feral berserker state with no real sense of Martial prowess, can be incredibly predictable and often will just attack the closest thing to her.

Author's Notes

Nerassa is a villain. A villain you can understand the motives of yes, but someone who constantly takes the wrong step out of shortsightedness and stubborn pettiness.

Quinton Salzar

"Once again, the flames of love burn brightly and reduce a worthless opponent to ash."

-Quinton, quoting their favorite B Action Movie

Quinton is a tall toned person with rectangle frame glasses and long flowing red hair often parted over their left eye to hide the part of their skull that has been augmented with cybernetics. They most often wear formal wear, vest, toes, turtle necks, dress shirts, and dress coats. They mainly wear bright blues, tan, beige, brown, or dark murky reds. As well as a furred cape they wear into battle.

Backstory

Quinton was born in Visalia during the worst of the Iron Hands war, their parents were fishermen, but they were killed in the final months of the Iron Hands war. When civilian casualties were at their highest. Enraged by this, Quinton enrolled to be an enforcer, and excelled in the Academy. Getting top marks in Math, Marksmanship, and even winning an intra Enforcer Tournament. One with many experienced top Enforcers entering.

These skills, espet their aptitude for accounting had them be not given an Enforcer position on graduation, but go undercover in a resistance cell as an accountant. Spending two years in this ceel Quinton became conflicted, seeing Lifetech no longer as the saviors who had wiped the Iron Hands, a race of bio organic robots, off the planet, but the oppressive regime they were. Combine this with discovery of their gender and a budding romance with a resistance leader Theo, Quinton was wrought with turmoil. When the time came for Quinton to choose a side, either stand with the resistance or assist the Enforcers in wiping the cell out, Quinton chose neither and ran.

Now though, Quinton has been found by Nerassa and has

Abilities

Limited fire magic, through their sword, they have limited fire magic capabilities. If they do not have the sword On them they can't use this ability. Using this require great amounts of stamina from Quinton, only being able to perform between three to five depending on the severity of the fire magic. Think of it like kaiken meets fire bending. Additionally, being magic from Quinton's world it has technological disruptive properties.

Strengths

Expert marksman with pistol and single shot long arms at medium and close range

Highly skilled in the enforcers own brand of martial arts. A defensive style focusing on efficiency, fluidity, and grapples. A style design around defensive strikes and counter attacks, with the goal of getting or throwing the opponent to the ground and subduing them as quickly as possible. Most similar to martial arts like systema and judo.

Great mathematician and an experienced accountant. I doubt this will matter but its true

Weaknesses

Hot headed, Quinton has a temper and that could be exploited to make them deviate from Nerassa's plan or make a mistake during combat.

Fragile ego: Quinton kinda hates themselves, and personal insults will throw them off their game and build their anger which can lead into that hot headedness stated above.

No major resistances: Quinton, is still just a person. A very skilled person, with a good amount of combat experience, but still just a person. Getting shot, will be a major blow.

Not actually good with a sword: Quinton, despite wielding a sword has no real formal training with it. Additionally, as much as possible Quinton doesn't want to resort to the fighting style they were trained in bc of emotional baggage around the person they were and their past. Quinton mainly fights with flashy impractical sword strikes they learn from watching cheesy Samurai movies. Pretty much anyone with any sort of sword training will recognize this and can exploit it
